The application is also for iPhone users. It has been translated into several languages.

Transcription of ribosomal RNA genes in murine neuroblastomas. The transcriptional activity of the ribosomal RNA gene (rDNA) sequences was analyzed in a series of 24 neuroblastoma cell lines. Single-cell level fluorescence in situ hybridization, flow cytometry and Southern analysis were employed. The results showed that the rDNA is highly transcribed in all neuroblastoma cell lines analyzed. However, only a minority of cells show the rDNA sequence in the nucleoli, indicating that most cells contain nonfunctional rDNA genes. The transcriptional activity of the rDNA was positively correlated with MYCN amplification. The frequent presence of inactive rDNA sequences in neuroblastoma cell lines indicates that factors other than MYCN may be involved in rDNA transcriptional silencing.

Sliding practice experience in safety-critical tasks. This research investigates how experienced critical tasks performers differ from novice performers when they are asked to engage in real-life tasks with safety implications. Experienced and novice participants did in an unencumbered speed-accuracy trade-off task, in which there was no specific direction for the right or left hand movements. We examined the variables involved in safe decision making by investigating the connection between goal-directed and goal-less performances in critical tasks. We found that overall performance was better, even though all performances were slower and less accurate, for the experienced participants in the default condition, and they produced less precise contours and shorter strokes. Moreover, there was a clear difference in the variability of the movements between the two groups, the experienced group having a higher variability of both movement execution and decision, in addition to planning and timing phases. Finally, we found no group difference in task performance under incongruent conditions. These results suggest that, in goal-directed tasks,

Ich kann das nicht gelernt haben - hat es wohl eine kleine/große Aufgabe oder einfache Sache verstanden? Kommen Sie zu mir, sagen Sie ihm, dass ich ein Ausstattungsgeschäft habe, das alles, was er braucht, ausstattet. A: Kommen Sie zu mir, sagen Sie ihm, dass ich ein Ausstattungsgeschäft habe, das alles, was er braucht, ausstattet. Ich finde die Aussage, dass etwas Ausstattungsgegenstände hat, freiwillig überflüssig. Ich glaube, das Wort kann nur benutzt werden, wenn das ein oder andere Teil einer genau festgelegten Ausstattung ist: Kann Ihr Auto in einem Ausstattungshändler geliefert werden? Kann dieser Autoschlüssel geliefert werden?

While the internet is being abuzz over an alleged protest-related death, a serious issue is arising in the state of Maharashtra regarding a documentary filmmaker's allegations against the state, and one that was going unreported in the mainstream. Komal Nahta, a documentary filmmaker and journalist, has filed a petition in the Bombay High Court, seeking a review of the Maharashtra Anti Corruption Bureau's decision to cancel her documentary on NCP Chief, Ajit Pawar, for "violation of confidentiality". The documentary, named Ajit Pawar: the Man With 50 Faces, was commissioned by Mumbai based website www.firstpost.com. The film sheds light on a major clean-up operation on a farm in Akola - one of those the former Union minister and NCP leader has owned since 1970. The film has been dropped by Youtube on flimsy grounds. The documentary is said to focus on the alleged corruption of NCP leader Ajit Pawar, prime accused in the irrigation scam in Maharashtra, along with his family, which is allegedly involved in the scam. When Ms Nahta spoke to The Hindu on phone on Saturday, it was on the backdrop of the latter's death on March 28, at the age of 58, in a road accident near Aurangabad, allegedly due to violence by senior NCP leader Rashid Desai's supporters. "Yes, the death of Nahta and the suppression of the documentary might be unfortunate, but I am still working on the documentary
